- (57) 1. A mop comprising:
 a handle with a working end;
 a pair of opposed rollers extending perpendicularly to the handle;
 a mop head comprising a sponge and a sponge holder; an actuator on the handle, the actuator being movable between a wringing position, an intermediate position, and a replacement position; and a connector linking the actuator to the sponge holder so that the sponge element is between the rollers when the actuator is in the wringing position, and the sponge head is free of the rollers when the actuator is in the re-placement position.
